Cover legend: KCNQ potassium ion channels are localized at the nodes of Ranvier. The cover image shows teased nerve fibers, immunolabeled for juxtaparanodal Kv1 channels (green) and nodal KCNQ channels (red). KCNQ2 and KCNQ3 are precisely colocalized with voltage-gated sodium channels at both the axonal initial segments and nodes. At initial segments, this localization is based on interaction with ankyrin-G adaptor proteins. For details, see the article by Pan et al. in this issue (pages 2599–2613).

Erratum: In the article “Brain Systems Mediating Cognitive Interference by Emotional Distraction,” by Florin Dolcos and Gregory McCarthy, which appeared on pages 2072–2079 of the February 15, 2006 issue, Table 1 is missing a line specifying the contrast involved in the ventral affective regions. The correct version of this Table is printed in this issue.
