Cover picture: A highly ordered afferent projection conveys spatial information to giant interneurons in the abdominal nervous system of crickets. The photo shows two axonal arborizations—one of which contacts dendrites of the medial giant interneuron (left afferent). The neurons were stained with cobalt and intensified using the Timm's silver method. The whole mounted preparation was then optically sectioned and enhanced with the aid of an image processor. Preparation stained by Rod Murphey and Jon Bacon, image processing by David Tieman.
